Monkeypox: What you need to know

Monkeypox is a rare viral infection. Recently, we have seen a number of cases in the UK.

The infection can spread through close physical contact, like kissing, skin-to-skin, sex or sharing things like bedding and towels.

The signs and symptoms are:

- Recent unexpected/unusual spots, ulcers or blisters anywhere on your body
- Headaches
- Fever
- Muscle aches
- Chills and exhaustion
- Swollen glands

You can help stop the spread of Monkeypox:

- If you or any recent partners have developed unexpected or unusual spots, ulcers or blisters on any part of your body, including your face or genitals call your local sexual health service, or NHS 111, as soon as possible. You will be treated sensitively and confidentially
- Avoid close physical contact with others until you have had medical advice. This will minimise the chance of passing it on

Top info for us to be talking about

“If you have recently been diagnosed with monkeypox, or think you have suspected symptoms of monkeypox – please take a break from events and parties. Close physical contact – even if sex is not involved - can pass monkeypox on to people around you.”

Don't be a jerk

No-one likes to find out they have a new infection. The way we respond when we're told – from a hook-up or by a friend – will determine how someone tells others in the future. Gossip, rumour, and nasty responses help none of us.

SWIPE

That is why we call for the urgent closure of all strip clubs, saunas, massage parlours, fetish events and clubs with dark rooms... whatever the sexual orientation of the clientele. Monkeypox does not respect anyone's sexuality. However, there is an additional urgency right now to close those premises that cater for a minority of gay and bisexual men since the disease initially seems to have spread among sexual networks linked to 3 major gay sites...Pride in Gran Canaria, Darklands fetish club in Belgium and a gay sauna in Madrid.

Monkeypox – important information for London gay venues, promoters, and sex on premises venues

You will have heard recent reports of an outbreak of monkeypox in the UK. Monkeypox can be transmitted through close physical contact (skin-to-skin) – including sex. The current outbreak is being seen especially in gay and bisexual men, with the majority of cases in men who live in London.

This is an emerging public health issue and we're all still learning about how and why monkeypox is being transmitted in these ways. That means information might change – so it's important to stay up-to-date and to get information from reliable sources (see below).
